bunting merchants. This chastisement cleared the whole country territory. After a period of repose, which was Mr. Avery, the Clerk of Arraigns, would be about Gondokoro and down towards Rewinka's imperatively needed, Baker commenced systematically to organise the districts which were in his possession. He made Fatiko the chief lown of the new territory, and appointed superintendents at the other stations. Before long the natives settled down wonderfully well under the new Government, and appeared exceedingly satisfied with the safety and quiet inouth for each but was paid with alacrity and regularity; and when Sir Samuel went finally. northwards, having established the reinforcemental sent him along the appreced region, he negroes at Faliko gave bin the most vociferous farewells, calling him "father" and "master," and looking upon him as their future protector. The term of the contract signed by Sir Samuel Baker and by the English engineers with the Khedive has now expired, and, having made all arrangements, the Pasha embarked at Gondokoro in one of the steamers brought up country by the expedition, kept watch on its movements. Next to Fatika the chief station of the new territory will be Gondokoro. Baker has marked out eight wore spots as principal pasts, and these will constitute a chain leading from Nubia to the Albert Nyanza. One thousand additional troops have been ordered down to complete the garrison of these stations.

Thus much for the political portion of the tidings brought by the gallant Pasha. I have further a most important geographical discovery to communicate—one which cannot fail. I think, to astound many scientific men in England. It is declared as an ascertained faci by the returning party that Lakes Tanganyika and Albert Nyanza are proved to be one and the same water. The length of this magfificent inland sea, thus, for the first tim made known to mankind, is not less than seven hundred miles, and it is announced as positive that a vessel can be hunched above Murchison's Falls, at the head of the Nyanza, and sail away to Ujiji, or lower, through ten degrees of Sir Samuel Baker, with his lady and suite, were all in excellent bealth when they arrived: and they leave us to day by the Berber country for Sonakin, to which port the Egyptian Govern ment are despatching a special steamer, which will bring them up the Red Sea to Suez. No losses have occurred of late among the Europeans from sickness, except that of Mr. Higgin bot ham, the chief engineer. A ROMANCE OF CANADA. Just thirty years ago this summer a little child, three years old, was playing on the stoop of its father's house, in Quobec. The house was in Richardson street, and in what are known as St. Roch Suburbs. For some reason, and child's nurse was out of the way for a time, and no one came to look for the little one-a great favorite ed, and through the long hours of darkness the distracted parents, aided by neighbours and police, hunted through the city. Next day a reward was offered, and the hunt was kept up more assiduously than before. All was fruitless. Weeks, months and years rolled away, and the child was unheard of. At last the family mourned their treasure as dead. Whatever its fate, there-seemed no earthly chance that they would ever hear of it more. And yet, about nix weeks ago, there came a denouement to this story of real life so old and unexpected. as to deserve record among the much talked of

from Quebec to Montreal, and, being in the latter city, stepped into a shop to bay a hat. This gentleman was a friend of the family MOHAIR and GRENADINE COSTUMES who had lost the child, and whose name was Richard. He observed, in ontering the shop, that the keeper's name was Richmond. This trifling and partial coincidence would have made no impression, had he not directly after noticed a surprising resemblance between Richmond, the batter, and the Richard family of Quebec. Going home to his lodgings, he wrote the adventure to his mother, who lives in that town, and after posting the letter, felt strongly moved to return and oross question Richmond touching his origin. This was done, and to some purpose, for Richmond declared that he had been reared from infancy by an Indian woman whom he had been taught to regard as mother. She had always been kind to nim, but never, until lying on her death-bod, confessed the fact that she had stolen him from his parents' door when an infant, had brought him to the forest among her red brothren, and raised him for her own. His family name she said she had forgotton, but gave that of "Richmond" as being something like it. Leaning on his stulwart steed, Stands King Olaf, and and weary; Loth to view the ruins dreary. Wherever flames exulting feed Still and sultry is the night-Not a rustle in the rushes. > . Not a breeze to stir the bushes With its fugitive delight. Dry and thirsty lies the land : Where crewhile the cooling ourrent Traced its courses, gay and errant, Glimmers now the numbleached sand. For and near resounds the air With the low of homeless cattle; O'er the bloody field of buttle Throws the sun its lurid glare. From below, a muffled ring. Like the fur, unceasing dirges Of the faintly murmaring surges, From his musing wakes the King. And a vast and weary throng-Peasants, armed with soythes, and brawny Spearmen, clad in wolf-skins tawny-Slowly wind the hills along. Spoke a warrior grave and boar To the King, his voice uplifted: "Tossed and vanquished, we have drifted. Stintly King, unto the shore. "We have cried to Thor and Frey; But our Gods no more are near us. Wrathful Thor no more will hear us; Give us water ere wordie! " We have beard that Christ the White Hath a balm for each disaster. We will worship Him, O master, Who our armies put to flight," Then with holy zeal aglow. With the power of strong believing. Swift the King, his sword upheaving, Smot the barren mountain's brow. Into spinters sprang the sword: And the mountain's ancient giant R used its echoes, fierce, defiant, As if weeking Christ the Lord. Ab! but from the earth's deep breast Came no bubbling fountain bursting, And the barren land lay thirsting, With its beavy doom oppressed. Rose a peasant then, and said. Chuckling with a ounning, low laugh: " Now we know, forsouth, King Olaf, Still is uncient Thor not Jend." Fierce the royal warriors frowned. " lay the wretch !" they shouted wildly. But the King rebuked them mildly, Low he knelt upon the ground. Grave and silent stood the throng. While be prayed with great contrition : "Lord, O save them from perdition;" I am week, but thou art strong!" And his tears fell hot and fast; Waked to life the barren mountain. Upward sprang a bubbling fountain, Rushing o'er the sun-bleached waste. Now is sheathed King Olaf's sword;

"Sketches in Persia," by Sir John Malcolm. ANECDOTE OF MENDELSSOHN. On one occasion of Mendelssohn being in Switzerland, he and Sir Michael met at the church of Friburg, in which building the to any musical taste-leave the town without going to hear it. At the time referred to the custodian was somewhat of a bear, and most determinedly refused, either for love or money, to permit any stranger to place his fingers upon the keys, although he himself had not the slightest pretension to the designation of an organist; and so far from showing the capabilities of the instrument induced very many to go away under the impression that they had been "sold," and that all "Murray" and other guide books had stated was nothing better than "a delusion and a snare." Mendelssohn was resolved, by hook or by crook, to ascertain what the Friburg organ was made of. For this purpose he drew the custodian out, working upon his weak points of characterfor the old man really loved the organ as if it had been his child-but as to getting his consent to touch it, that seemed to be beyond the probability of realisation. Every one who ever had the good fortune to be acquaint. ed with Mendelssohn must have been attracted by his winning manners, his courteous bearing, and his manifestation of decided character. Whether he won upon the old man by any of these peculiarities of his "native worth" in particular, or by their combination, can only be inferred. Suffice it to say that after long parley he was permitted to try one range of keys. One hand he employed at first, quietly using the other in drawing the stone, as if to test the variety of their quality, and when he had thus got out us many as seemed applicable for his purpose he made a dash, which completely staggered the old man, and began to play as he alone could play. The old man gasped for breath He cluiched the rail ogainst which he was standing, and for an instant seemed as if he would daig this bold intruder from his seat. That impulse was, however, only momentary, the departing squall from his bushy beard for he soon stood, as it were, spellboand, and bluff English face. "Let'em just come until a break in the gushing harmony here and try, that's all!" enabled him to make an effort to ascertain "This is our sixth squall since we got into organ speak as he had never heard it speak morning's work!
